

Dear Jacob Johnston and Flight Team,

I am writing this cover letter in regards to an internship with Flight. I really appreciate that Flight focuses on getting ideas active and ready for future development. I believe that rapid prototyping can truly be an asset in the development world, as it can bring imagination to reality. Based on my affinity for problem solving, my strengths in goal prioritization and full stack development, I could be a great asset to your team.

From over a decade of serving drinks, transporting clients and goods, I developed a keen sense of customer service. I have strived to improve core areas of customer service, especially in communication and goal prioritization. While working as a cab driver I was driving almost 60,000 miles a year. That's a lot of "Get me to work on time!", "I can't miss my flight!", and "Thanks for always being ready to drive me home from work!" It was a great chance to work with a diverse population of clients all while continuing to better my skills with new opportunities every day. I am excited to bring my superior customer service skills, goal oriented attitude, and development abilities to Flight.

In the Fall of 2017, I began what I soon learned would be a lifetime path of learning in the development world. I was spending free time immersed in tutorials via Treehouse. I became so interested that I took the plunge and decided to pursue the C#/.NET track with Epicodus in January of 2018. I quickly became enamored with the learning, problem solving, and exploration of programming. I found C#,.NET, and especially JavaScript to be very intuitive both in learning and in implementation.

With my great customer service skills and my enthusiasm for programming, I know that I can be a valuable asset to your company. I am on a purposeful journey where my vision, dreams and passion are realized through problem solving and continued education. I look forward to hearing from you.

Thanks,
